PLEASE don't let Microsoft get away with merely donating computers and software to needy schools. This is so cynical it's pathetic. I saw right through it right away when I heard about it, and I'm not exactly a rocket scientist. It's a way for Microsoft to get a foothold in schools where they already have WAY too much influence. Microsoft is attempting to settle an antitrust lawsuit by committing antitrust actions. How incredible is that? Let them donate the financial EQUIVALENT of those computers and software and allow the school districts to buy what they need most, including other types of computers and software.
